

University of Mindanao Farm-to-Market Passage Project

The University of Mindanao continues to uphold its commitment to community partnership and sustainable engagement by supporting the Bagobo Tagabawa Tribal Community. Fresh, organically grown farm products cultivated by Bagobo Tagabawa farmers were made available for purchase across various university offices, providing faculty and staff with direct access to healthy and affordable produce.

This initiative goes beyond economic support. It serves as a platform for cultural appreciation and empowerment, recognizing the invaluable contributions of indigenous communities. By fostering market access for the Bagobo Tagabawa farmers, the university not only strengthens local livelihoods but also affirms its role in championing sustainability, cultural preservation, and community progress.

Through efforts like this, the University of Mindanao reinforces its mission to bridge education with meaningful social impact, empowering indigenous communities while promoting healthier, more sustainable lifestyles for its stakeholders.
